CHEAPER POSTAGE

TO GREAT BRITAIN

By recent arrangements between the Dominion and Imperial governments the postage on Canadian newspapers to Britain has been reduced to the same amount as that on papers addressed to points in Canada or the United States. It was one of the incongruities of the postal rates that while a letter to England cost only two cents, the smallest newspaper to the same address cost one cent per copy even when sent from the office of publication. How such an excessive charge came to be first imposed is a mystery, and why it should have remained so long is quite as great a mystery. If there is one thing more desirable than another in the interests of Imperial unity, it is an interchange of knowledge of events occurring at the centre and circumference of the empire. There is no means whereby this interchange of information which is so necessary can be effected so cheaply and so well as by the newspapers. It is more desirable that papers should be carried cheaply between Canada and Britain than that they should be carried cheaply throughout Canada. On an ordinary weekly paper costing $1.00 per year subscription, the postage to England was 52 cents. A semi-weekly paper published at a subscription rate of a $1.00 per year cost $1.04 cents postage. The amount is not large but is so disproportionate that it had as much effect as if it were. While the post office department cannot be congratulated on their having secured this change quickly, at least newspaper publishers will give them credit for having secured it. It is a greater step towards closer relations and increased confidence between the heart of the empire and Canada than the reduction in letter postage.

THE TOO EARLY BIRD

While it is very gratifying to know that the season's rush of immigration to the Edmonton district has already begun, it is only right to caution all concerned that neither families nor stock should be brought at this season of the year, unless arrangements have been made for shelter for family and feed for stock. In the first place there is no object in coming so early in the season, if the intention is to look up and locate homesteads. When the ground is entirely or partially covered with snow it is more difficult to attempt to make a selection. The selection of a farm is an act of great importance and far reaching consequences to the homesteader. He should not under any circumstances take chances on securing something with which afterwards he will not be satisfied. No man should be made to regret that he should have made a mistake, and for even the individual desiring to buy under easy payment waiting for the snow to go is a loss without an object. In the case of family or stock, the conditions are most seriously aggravated. Any considerable rush of people will find it absolutely impossible to secure such accommodation as their condition, and the conditions of the climate, render necessary at this season, without incurring heavy expense. The same is even more true regarding stock. The sector who brings stock now and has to feed them at lower prices of fodder will find himself a serious loser. No doubt people can overcome these disadvantages but there is no object in their having to overcome them. They gain nothing by coming so early in the season. They lose money and the seeds of dissatisfaction are sown which will have a bad effect for years or possibly tend to final discouragement and failure. The proper time to come with family and stock is in May, and not too early in May either. When the grass has started, when the snow has all gone, when the frosty nights have ceased, and the June rains have not yet begun, it is no hardship to any ordinary family to tent out, and cattle will thrive on the prairie without danger of loss and without expense. Traveling is frequently at its best, and the nature of the land, the layout of the land and the characteristics of the vegetation can be seen most plainly. More can be done in one day under these circumstances than in a month of running over the country while still partly under snow, when the new-comer, least of all men, can tell what it is like. There is no danger of frost-bitten hay, and the early construction of one or more trunk lines of railway makes a location 100 miles out, if in the right place, as good as one within 20 miles of town. When the settler comes he should lose no time, but he gains nothing by coming before the proper time.

It is the judgment of experienced settlers that it does not pay to attempt a crop on raw land the first season in this country. The extra expense in getting on to the land soon enough and getting it into condition for crop, more than counterbalances the advantage to be derived from the crop even if it comes according to expectation; and this is not by any means sure. Everything is against success of the first crop on new land, put in hurriedly and late, without knowledge of the conditions and possibly with inferior seed. If it gives a good return it is the strongest evidence of the agricultural advantage of the country; if the results are not good it is no evidence against the country, but it is a loss to the settler just the same. The settler should get on to his land as that he can begin breaking in June for the next season's crop. His breaking finished he puts up hay for his stock and then temporary buildings for the shelter of his family and stock. This can be done by the settler's own labor without expenditure of cash; and possibly he may have time to earn a few dollars besides. During the winter he gets out rail timber and timber for more permanent buildings. In the spring he is ready to put in his crop in good time, the ground in good condition, the seed well chosen. He has plenty of time to do the work well and he is sure of a crop that year if anybody is. The settler who enters upon his new life in this way has everything in his favor, while he who attempts too much generally achieves the natural result. Three-fourths of the hardships and discomforts suffered by new settlers in this country are not from their doing too little but from their trying to do too much, and doing it at the wrong time.

TOWN COUNCIL

A special meeting of the Edmonton town council was held Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the council chamber. The meeting was called to discuss the matter of a new sewer on Mainway avenue, instead of brick sewer and to hear Mr. Fry's report on the approximate cost of the same. Mayor Short and Councilmen Gallagher, Fraser and Ross were present. Mr. Ashbridge, town engineer, and Mr. Fry were also present. The mayor called on Mr. Fry for his report, which he read. Mr. Ashbridge, town engineer, was asked for his opinion concerning the saving to the town in using the tile sewer. Mr. Ashbridge, having consulted Mr. W. C. Chipman, engineer, Toronto, said that as a single strength tile with concrete would be satisfactory, there would be a saving of about $600 to the town. Mr. Fry maintained that the saving would be $1200. The mayor then asked Mr. Fry if he would guarantee a saving of $1200 to which Mr. Fry stated his reasons for refusing. Mayor Short then recommended that Messrs. Ashbridge and Fry withdraw and by comparing figures arrive at a somewhat definite figure of the saving to the corporation. After consultation Mr. Ashbridge still refused to place the proposed saving at a figure above $600. Mr. Fry made an offer which would mean a saving of $600 upwards. Mr. Ashbridge recommended that the council accept this offer. Moved by Councilman Gallagher, seconded by Councilman Fraser that Mr. Fry's offer be accepted.—Carried.

The matter of the expropriation of J. E. Lubbock's property was then discussed at length and finally on motion of Councilman Gallagher—Ross a committee, consisting of the mayor and Councilman Grier, was appointed to deal with the matter.

EGG LAKE

This weather is evidently an answer to our remarks of two weeks ago regarding freights and the melting of the snow.

Mr. Lambert, who came out from England a short time ago, and took up land in the new settlement 20 miles north of us, stayed at N. E. Logan's on Saturday night on his way to town. He was accompanied by Jas. Curle, one of a number of young Scotchmen who have located in the same district. Mr. Lambert has nearly finished a temporary dwelling house on his homestead, and expects in a short time to move up his family and effects, at present in Strathcona. John Edgson also was down from "away up there" on Monday, and bought a head of cattle from N. E. Logan. It would be a satisfaction to us if these newcomers would invent or borrow an appropriate name for their settlement. It is known to a few as "Grand Prairie," but this name is apt to confuse it with the larger Grand Prairie farther north. Some of our Cree speaking friends call it the Manias settlement, in allusion to those among its residents who are entirely new to western life and manners.

Two Norwegians passed Tuesday night at Logan's. They had come out from Edmonton on foot, and left on Wednesday morning for the nameless country spoken of above, where they intend to take up land. These men ought to make good settlers. A fifty mile tramp through a snow storm (return tickets at double fare) is quite a strenuous undertaking, even with the prospect of good land for settling around Egg lake, and unless old horses late up soon, some of the four-footed inhabitants may have to be put upon short rations before spring, March 13, '08.

TILERS

THE GRAIN COMMISSIONER

Judgment has been delivered by Judge Richardson at Regina, in an appealed test case under the provisions of the grain act. The case arose through action entered by grain commissioner Castle against C. P. R. station agent Benoit, of Sinitula, for refusing to a farmer a car which had been ordered by him having given it to an elevator whose order was subsequent to that of the farmer. In the first action before the local J. P. the station agent was convicted of a violation of the act; and Judge Richardson has sustained the conviction. The act provides that an order book shall be kept at every railway station from which grain is shipped; that orders for cars shall be entered in this book; and that when cars arrive they shall be distributed to the parties giving their orders in the order in which they are given, one car to each person ordering until all have received a car, and (in balance of the cars, if any, to be divided proportionately according to the number in each order. The purpose of the act was perfectly clear; it was to put the farmer who had grain to ship on an equality with the dealer who had grain to ship. It may not have been proper to do this. But clearly that was the intention of the act; and as Judge Richardson sees it the intent was plain. For some weeks, or possibly months, after the grain season opened last fall, the railway company persistently gave elevators a preference in cars, practically ignoring the applications of the farmers; and did this with the sanction of grain commissioner Castle. At last, objection was raised to the course pursued; suit was entered in the name of Mr. Castle against the station agent; the merits of the case and the rendering of the act were tried out at the magistrate's court and afterwards in the court of appeal, and it is found that the law had been systematically contravened, very probably until the date of the decision rendered by Judge Richardson. As a matter of fact the whole year's shipments have been, or should have been, made while this the most important provision of the grain act was being ignored.

A decision has been arrived at on the question raised, but who knows, when another shipping season opens, if another may not be raised and again the intent of parliament defeated. This is not according to our system of government. It is the foundation stone of the British system that somebody is personally responsible for every administrative act. It is not enough to say that this matter must be decided by the courts. The business of the country must be carried on while the courts are reaching a decision, and the government of the country or its employees are responsible for the method of conduct of that business. Grain commissioner Castle was a party to the contravention of the law against the interests of the wheat during the early part of the shipping season; and his action or inaction then has resulted in practically setting aside the law for a whole year.

In this matter either the commissioner, or the administration appointing him, is responsible. The only way in which the administration can relieve itself of responsibility is by relieving Mr. Castle of his duties. It may have been an error of judgment on his part. It may have been lack of decision, it may have been anything or nothing. It makes no difference. The fact remains that the plain intent and wording of the law was ignored on his responsibility to the detriment of the farmers in regard to the results of a whole year's work. The consequences are too large and far reaching to be submitted to because of the fault or even the misfortune of one man. The purpose of the law was to protect the farmer. Mr. Castle was given the authority to administer the law. He saw fit to leave the farmer where he was before the law was passed. There is only one conclusion possible, and that is that his usefulness is gone, and the sooner he goes the better. The farmers of this country cannot afford to be jockeyed with over claims of law. They have the means of enforcing the principle of responsible government, which it would be well that all concerned should take notice of in due time. The verdict "Nobody to blame" will not be accepted by the court of final appeal in this case.

THE PLAY

The closing night of the Harold Nelson company's appearance at Edmonton drew the largest house of the week. The play was "Miss Nell," a comedy of the time of the restoration, in England, when manners were everything and morals nothing. The leading characters are: King Charles the Second, his two favorites Nell Gwynne and the Duchess of Portsmouth, and his prime minister, the Duke of Buckingham. As might be expected the action is striking and lively and the costumes elegant. Mrs. Cornyn as Nell Gwynne had the leading part, and in portraying it assumed a character which was in fact mildly "louch" with an innocence of appearance and expression that was most charming, and explained, if anything could explain, the influence held by the historic original. No very heavy acting was required from the other members of the company, but all these, their parts most cleverly. Mr. Nelson as King Charles was certainly very handsome and irresponsible. Miss Davidson as the historic Duchess of Portsmouth played the thankless part of the villain in the piece very well. Clifford Lane Bruce as the Duke of Buckingham looked his part. The play was most enjoyable throughout. There was not a dull moment in it; a reliving with all due respect, after so much tragedy.

Between acts Miss Scott sang "Loch Lomond" most acceptably, and Mr. Yale nearly put the audience in hysterics with his songs and recitations.

The company give "The Merchant of Venice," in Ross Hall, Strathcona, to-night, and "Ingomar," to-morrow (Tuesday) night.

The matinee on Saturday afternoon was very largely attended. The play was "The Two Flasks" with Miss Davidson in the leading part as "Cigarette." The play and specialties were thoroughly enjoyed.

It is announced that the company have arranged to visit Edmonton again on the fair days, June 30th and July 1st and 2nd. They will be very welcome.
